

Peters MacGregor Investments Ltd
Investment Manager's Update - September 2008

PERFORMANCE

With the MSCI World Index falling 11.39% in the September quarter, we have done well, outperforming the MSCI by 14.19% and providing a positive net return of 2.80% after all costs and taxes.

During the quarter we sold part of our US holdings as the A$ depreciated against the US$. An increasing US$ means that our weightings in A$ increase which requires us to reduce our holdings accordingly. We sold out completely of Western Union as its price reached our valuation and repurchased Fairfax Financial (FFH), the Canadian property and casualty insurer. Cash finished at around 6%.

COMMENTARY

The imprudent lending practices by many banking institutions around the world during the current decade are now being recognised along with the associated losses. This in turn has seen many of these banking institutions lose most of their shareholders equity and set in train a massive deleveraging in the capital markets. Many governments have now stepped in to reduce the pain caused by this reduction in borrowings and to help stop the complete gumming up of the banking system. It is all front page news!

How long this will take to work through and how much pain will be endured is anyone's guess, but it is not likely to be short and sweet and we remain very cautious.

Share and currency markets have seen enormous swings. The Australian dollar alone has fallen 17% against the US dollar in the quarter. Given that we hedge the currency, the portfolio gleaned no benefit from this fall nor will it prove costly if rates reverse.

This is without doubt the most interesting time we have experienced in the market. As a value based investment house, the more that emotions drive share prices and we are seeing plenty of that at present, the more likely it is for us to find mispriced shares.

Will the market fall further? That clearly is the big question and with the level of pessimism prevailing at present, it is a real possibility. We will however, continue to purchase when we find value at a big discount and sell when that discount disappears. The discount in the price of our portfolio compared to our assessed valuation is the biggest it has been in over 6 years and the financial strength of each holding is first rate.

A good example is Berkshire Hathaway, our largest position at quarter end, which has seen its financial strength highlighted during this volatile period. It has been able to make attractive investments on very attractive terms in Goldman Sachs and General Electric in the order of $5 Billion and $3 Billion respectively. With its cash war chest north of $20 Billion and growing, these market conditions should prove opportunistic and highly profitable for the company.

Fairfax Financial

We have owned Fairfax previously and with the share price falling significantly during the quarter to about 80% of book value, we once again took the opportunity to buy it. Prem Watsa and his team believe the current economic malaise will be long and painful and have structured their insurance businesses and their investment portfolio to profit from it with a very strong focus on protecting their capital base. We couldn't be happier to have such first rate management at one of our holdings and they typify the caliber of management we have at our other holdings.

CONCLUSION

Our portfolio has changed a little in the quarter, having sold Western Union as it reached our valuation and adding Fairfax Financial, which we have previously owned. This resulted in a net decrease in the cash position to approximately 6%.

It was another volatile quarter in global share markets, resulting in negative returns across the major indices. With the MSCI falling 11.39% and our positive return of 2.80%, we outperformed by 14.19%.

We are very pleased with the overall composition of the portfolio and expect these businesses to grow their values substantially in the years ahead, irrespective of broad equity market movements or the economic environment, and we look forward to participating in this growth in business value.
